As our remodeled old First Meeting House looked when our forefathers first met to protest against their many foreign grievances, and from which, with the blessing of God and their aged pastor, they finally went courageously forth to battle for the liberties of a free people and the founding of a nation.

PREFACE.

While preparing my "History of Walpole" for publication in 1905, feeling that the honorable and patriotic part our worthy forefathers had early played in saving this portion of America to the white man and civilization, as well as in their final and more glorious achievement of our National Independence was but little understood, I dwelt to some length on a few of the more vital points of general interest, but omitted many of the patriots' names which were no longer common in our changed population. Finding since that many of the scholars and some of the teachers in our public schools have found the "History" of substantial pleasure and benefit, to encourage them still further in their grateful appreciation of the great debt we all owe to those self-sacrificing toilers in our behalf, I now offer the following "Roll of Honor," not all Minute Men, but, I trust, all Patriots. The highest distinction one can ever receive from another in this country is that of being a worthy descendant of one of its loyal members. The standard is lofty. May you all reach it. Especially would the country rejoice to hear of the regeneration of certain people in our midst who so thoughtlessly brought disgrace upon themselves and dishonor upon the Town by their futile opposition to the Patriots' Memorial, herein represented, the first and only public mark of respect offered here, to those heroic winners of our dearly purchased Independence.

Col Bullard, one of the four patriots commemorated, was our school teacher here just prior to the Revolution, and taught both his pupils and their fathers the priceless principles of justice and freedom, and when all peaceable measures had proved vain, courageously led them to our first armed resistance to the invading foe, many under his command being only sixteen and seventeen years of age. The colonel also taught here immediately on the successful close of the war. What more inspiring lesson could be put before the thoughtless youth of to-day than this pursuit and achievement of lofty purpose, even on the High School Grounds?

BULLARD, COL. SETH, son of Solomon and Jemima, born Jan. 6, 1737. Best known as Colonel, Muster Master and Major Bullard. On record as Colonel Bullard of the 4th Suffolk Regt. on several occasions. In 1760 he began his honorable career as schoolmaster in Walpole. In 1773, when he was ensign in the Walpole Co., he was the first man chosen to draw up a report of our grievances against England. In 1774 he was delegated by Walpole to meet Thomas Cushing, one of the Delegates to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia, and pay him a sum of money for Patriotic uses. He was also of the Committee of Correspondence with Boston, and drew up a covenant with that of Boston. In November, 1774, he was chosen one of the Committee of Inspection to see that Walpole people lived up to the patriotic covenant about the use of imported tea, manufactured goods and other regulations. In 1773, while teaching school in Walpole, he labored to awaken a proper spirit of patriotism among the young men, and got the town to have the minute men well drilled and ready for instant action. On April 19, 1775, he heard the distant alarm and led his full company over the fields to Lexington and Concord, following the enemy on their hurried retreat to their main lines and then threw his command across Roxbury Neck. After a service of six days he got men enough to serve under him again for three months, to keep the enemy hemmed in at Roxbury. While stationed at Roxbury he resigned his place on the Board of Selectmen of Walpole and in February, 1776, was appointed Major of his Regt. While Major he went to the front again in Washington's New York campaign, and was again chosen Selectman in the October Town Meeting of 1776. While Moderator he had passed a resolution looking to a State Constitution and was also the first chosen of a committee to see what the people of the town had done in the war. May 20, 1779, he was chosen Representative to the General Court. In 1780 the General Court elected him Muster Master with rank of Colonel for what are now Suffolk and Norfolk Counties, which had six regiments. In 1783 he again taught one of the Walpole schools. From 1778 to 1780; from 1784 to 1786; in 1790; from 1796 to 1798, and in 1800 he represented the town of Walpole in the General Court. He married Joanna, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Whiting) Lewis, Nov. 3, 1761. He is buried in the old Town Cemetery on Main Street For services such as these the Patriots' Memorial was designed by the author to furnish a permanent object lesson to the thoughtless and indifferent, and such it stands.

Benjamin Hawes's Regt., in March, 1777, for the Continental army to represent Walpole, although he represented Medfield at various other times; joined the Artillery Co. of Capt. Seward in Col. Crane's Regt.; also Sergt. in same. In May, 1778, was at Valley Forge Camp; in 1780, at New Windsor, in Capt. Thomas Seward's Co., 36th Artillery; 30 years old, dark complexion and some six and a half feet tall. He received both state and national bounty. He was at Monmouth, Princeton, Trenton and Valley Forge with John Lewis and a few other Walpole men. He is on the town records at the time of his death, May 31, 1835, as a "Valiant Soldier of the Revolution." He lies in the Walpole Plain Cemetery, where a new stone has been erected at his grave.

Thus it is seen that out of a population of only 967, 312 able-bodied men were sent by Walpole as her sacrifice for the achievement of our National Independence. Many still lie where they fell, others in unknown graves, some even in this town in graves until now unmarked. Although an unappreciated and most hopeless task, the writer has made the attempt to erect a substantial testimonial to all, relying for his reward upon the approval of Heaven and the just sense of all patriotic citizens in future generations.

Lieut. Barachiah Lewis, the leading figure in the "Patriots' Memorial," as the Memorial states, was one of the leading pioneers in freeing Walpole and Dedham territory from both the Indian foe and wild beasts, that for the first time made it possible for the white man here to live in peace and safety, and raise enough from his land to keep his family from sickness and starvation. He was also an officer in the wars of King William and Queen Anne, in the terrible struggle here between the white man and the savage; also constable, tything man, tax collector and surveyor, with jurisdiction from Roxbury to Wrentham, and spent his short life of forty-seven years in saving this part of the country for the white man and civilization, for you and for me. The office of Constable, at that time, was like that of the High Constable of England, being both of a military and civil character, and held only by leading citizens of the community. Brought up by his uncle, Capt. John White, the noted Indian fighter of Lancaster, and receiving his first baptism of blood when five of his own family were treacherously slain and the whole town carried into captivity, until he succumbed to his wounds and hardships, he ever proved a strong arm to lean upon, and the towns all around early sought his aid.

He was named and baptized by the worthy pastor, Rev. Joseph Rowlandson, the sole graduate of Harvard College in 1652, Barachiah, "Blessed by Jehovah," as the expression of the exposed settlement of Lancaster on the birth of a strong male child. His life service in protection of New England towns from the scourge justified that general impression—Sherborn, Lancaster, and Haverhill especially had cause for thankfulness. He lived long enough to see white children for the first time playing by the open doorways and women safely strolling in the fields.

The savage and the wild beast here had been subdued for all time, and the old flintlock was at last hung up by the fireside. Peace and safety had come as our lasting inheritance. Who are those who would belittle such men as these?

THE END.
